2004 EDMUND S. MUSKIE/FREEDOM SUPPORT ACT GRADUATE FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

A PROGRAM OF THE BUREAU OF EDUCATIONAL AND CULTURAL AFFAIRS OF THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Thank you for your interest in the Edmund S. Muskie/FREEDOM Support Act Graduate Fellowship Program.

For more than half a century, the people of the United States have supported international educational and cultural exchange programs as an investment in global understanding and peace. Such exchange programs have a long track record of bringing future leaders from around the world to the United States—and of giving talented young Americans invaluable experiences and insights abroad.

As President George W. Bush has observed, “In today’s complex and rapidly changing global marketplace, our collective and individual prosperity relies increasingly on political, economic, and social cooperation that transcends traditional national and cultural barriers.” The Edmund S. Muskie/FREEDOM Support Act Graduate Fellowship Program has addressed this challenge successfully for the past ten years.

The U.S. Congress established the Edmund S. Muskie Graduate Fellowship Program in 1992 to support democracy and economic development in Eurasia. Now known as the Muskie/FSA program, it provides opportunities for outstanding young professionals to study at the master’s degree level in the United States. Over the past decade, more than 2,800 men and women have studied in 11 academic fields at 195 U.S. universities.

The Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs (ECA) in the U.S. Department of State is responsible for the management and oversight of many of the U.S. government’s international exchanges. Underlying the role of exchanges in U.S. foreign policy is the belief that mutual understanding is of vital importance in an increasingly interdependent world, and that person-to-person exchange and training is the most effective way to promote mutual understanding. ECA also considers that international exchanges enhance the effectiveness of the United States in dealing with other nations, and that the exchange of persons and ideas is essential to the promotion of democracy, economic prosperity, international cooperation, peace and security around the world.

The Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs has awarded American Councils for International Education: ACTR/ACCELS and the Open Society Institute (OSI) grants to conduct a merit-based competition to recruit, select, place and support Fellows throughout the academic and internship components of the program. These organizations provide follow-on activities for program alumni to continue fostering the development of democratic systems and market economies after program participants return home.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Muskie/FSA Graduate Fellowship Program provides for graduate level studies in business administration, economics, education, environmental management and policy, international affairs, journalism and mass communications, law, library and information science, public administration, public health, and public policy. It is the goal of the Muskie/FSA Program that Fellows, upon their return home, will contribute to the economic and democratic growth of their countries and serve as leaders in the targeted fields of study.

Academic programs will begin in the summer of 2004. Fellows will be placed at academic institutions throughout the United States to take part in graduate programs that are from one to two years in length. Most programs lead to a master's degree or certificate from a U.S. institution, depending on the field of specialization, type of program, and the needs of the candidate.

Muskie/FSA Fellows are enrolled in U.S. higher educational institutions according to their academic interests and professional goals. Fellows may not select their U.S. host universities. Independent applications to U.S. universities neither disqualify applicants from consideration for the Muskie/FSA Program, nor do they enable participants to select their host universities, if they are chosen for the Muskie/FSA Program. During their term of study, Muskie/FSA Fellows must meet the academic standards and requirements of the Muskie/FSA Program and their U.S. host universities. Fellows who successfully complete one academic year of study will have the opportunity to participate in a twelve-week internship for practical training in their field of specialization.

IMPORTANT: Under the terms of the grant and laws governing the J-1 visa required for participation in the Muskie/FSA Program, Muskie/FSA Fellows must return to their home countries immediately upon completion of their fellowships for a period of at least two years. Fellows may not continue for Ph.D. or other studies, and are not eligible for extended practical training or employment in the United States. NO requests for visa extensions, waivers, or transfers will be granted under any circumstances.

MUSKIE

Selection Process & Schedule

Competition for the Muskie/FSA Program is merit-based and selection will be made on the basis of academic excellence, professional aptitude, leadership potential in the field of specialization, and knowledge of English.

October 31, 2003 (by 17:00!)	Application deadline. See pages 9-10 of the application packet for details on where you must submit your application. Applications received after the deadline will not be considered.
November-December 2003	Field-specific selection committees composed of U.S. academics, specialists, and admission officers meet in the U. S. to review applications and select semifinalists.
Late December 2003	Muskie/FSA coordinators in Eurasia begin to notify applicants of their mid-selection status.
January 2004	Semifinalists are tested and interviewed in their home countries. Semifinalists in all fields will be required to take the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL). Semifinalists in Business Administration will also be required to take the Graduate Management Admission Test (GMAT). Semifinalists in Economics, Environmental Management and Policy, Journalism and Mass Communications, Library and Information Science, and Public Health must also take the Graduate Record Exam (GRE). The Muskie/FSA Program will cover the cost of the TOEFL, GMAT, and GRE for semifinalists. Assistance is available from the Muskie/FSA Program to help cover the cost of transportation to and from the testing and interview sites for semifinalists with financial need.
March 2004	Field-specific selection committees convene in the U. S. to review semifinalist files in full, including test and interview results. Finalists and alternates are selected and university placements are recommended.
April 2004	Semifinalists are notified of their final selection status.

Financial Terms of the Fellowship

Funding will be applied towards the cost of tuition, room, board, stipend, textbooks, international transportation, professional enrichment activities, and accident and sickness insurance. For Fellows in programs that exceed one year in length, the amount of funding provided by the Muskie/FSA Program during the 2005-2006 academic year will be adjusted according to the Fellows' internship salary in the summer of 2005. The Muskie/FSA Program provides no financial support for dependents. Note: Opportunities for continued professional development will be available to alumni of the Muskie/FSA Program.

Participant Responsibility

Finalists must attend a mandatory pre-departure orientation and may be required to attend a summer English-language program. Muskie/FSA Fellows must uphold the academic standards of the host institution and undertake full-time study for the duration of the program. Applicants should be aware that graduate students in the eleven areas of specialization must adhere to the established curriculum of the U.S. host university. Fellows will not be able to undertake independent research and will not be permitted to change their assigned host institution or field of study once accepted to the Muskie/FSA Program. During the practical training period, Fellows must uphold professional standards and meet the expectations of the organization sponsoring the internship. Failure to maintain academic and professional standards will result in dismissal from the Muskie/FSA Program.

Funding for the Muskie/FSA Program is limited and the program is highly competitive; not all qualified applicants will receive awards.

FIELD DESCRIPTIONS

The information provided below is intended only as a general guideline, providing broad descriptions of the eleven fields of study offered under the 2004 Muskie/FSA Program. It is important for applicants to understand that, in the United States, a wide variety of graduate programs are offered in each major field described below. The curricula, course content, types of degrees offered, and the lengths of degree programs vary greatly at different U.S. universities. A number of factors are involved in placing Fellows at host universities and finalists are not guaranteed their preferred program length. The university deemed most appropriate for a finalist may not offer the length of program for which the applicant has applied. It is critical that each applicant selects his/her field of study and specialization within that field thoughtfully. Applicants are encouraged to further research these fields and the different graduate programs offered by U.S. universities in these fields before selecting a field of study on the application. Information is available at local U.S. educational information centers, on the Internet, and through other resources. It is the responsibility of the applicant to select the appropriate field of study and specialization within that field. The selection committee makes placement decisions based on information provided by the applicant. It is in the applicant's best interest to thoroughly research the field and to write a statement of purpose that accurately reflects his/her understanding of, and interest in, the field.

Business Administration - Prepares individuals to plan, organize, and direct the operations of a firm's or organization's resources, including personnel, money, materials, and technology. Generally includes instruction in management theory, financial management, human resources management, organizational behavior, accounting and other quantitative methods, purchasing and logistics, marketing, and business decision-making.

Economics - The study of the production, conservation, and allocation of resources in conditions of scarcity, together with the organizational frameworks related to these processes. The analytical skills of economics are useful in evaluating alternative methods of achieving society's goals and objectives and in formulating strategies and policies that will help to achieve these objectives.

Education -

In determining selection for awards, top priority will be given to outstanding applications in educational policy, higher education administration, and school administration. Applications for graduate study in special education, teaching and curriculum development (in subjects other than languages), and international and comparative education will be welcome and considered on a case-by-case basis. Applications from teachers solely wishing to improve their language teaching (English or other languages) will generally not be among the priorities.

Educational Policy prepares students to apply sound analytic techniques to the design of education policies and the analysis of problems in education while understanding the political, social and economic forces that influence educational policy. This specialization typically combines training in quantitative and qualitative research methodologies with course work in educational policy issues, the educational policy process, and historical, cultural, economic and political contexts in which policy is designed and implemented.

Higher Education Administration provides a set of courses which prepares individuals to work in a variety of administrative positions at an institution of higher education. Courses may include budgeting, finance, history of higher education, and student personnel administration.

International and Comparative Education provides students with coursework related to the international and transcultural dimensions of education. Students in this specialization may be required to further narrow their comparative study of education through subspecialization in an academic discipline (economics, history, philosophy, etc.) or professional educational field (adult education, bilingual education, higher education, etc.), or by focusing on a particular geographic region.

Primary or Secondary School Administration focuses on the management and leadership of primary or secondary schools. Coursework can include budgeting, facilities management, planning, organizational theory, leadership, strategy, negotiations, and fundraising.

Primary or Secondary School Teaching and Curriculum provides a set of courses geared toward the preparation of primary or secondary school teachers. Areas of focus include pedagogy, curriculum design, and educational assessment. These programs often include practicum teaching under the supervision of a master teacher. Secondary school teachers must indicate their subject area (history, mathematics, etc.).

Special Education, generally a specialization for those intending to work in primary or secondary education, provides educators with special skills for the instruction of children who are mentally or physically challenged and do not perform at the average of their age group. These programs often include a practicum teaching under the supervision of a master teacher.

Environmental Management and Policy - Includes analysis of the effects of human activities on the environment from the perspectives of the natural and engineering sciences, the social sciences, and the humanities. Includes instruction in environmental, natural, and social sciences; environmental economics; and regional, national and global environmental problems. Environmental Management encompasses a wide variety of possible specializations, including natural resource management which provides instruction on how to manage, utilize and protect valuable natural resources; and environmental policy which prepares students to analyze, form and implement governmental, private, or non-governmental policy related to the environment.

International Affairs - The study of international politics and institutions and the conduct of diplomacy, trade, and foreign policy. Includes multi-disciplinary coursework that examines peoples, events, movements, institutions, societies, cultures, and issues, with instruction in history, international economics, law, politics, sociology, anthropology, and political geography.

Journalism and Mass Communications - The study of journalism and mass communications encompasses all types of modern mass communications media -- newspapers, magazines, publications, periodicals, books, radio, television, photography, corporate video, and satellite transmissions. As a diversified field of study, journalism and mass communications attracts individuals interested in reporting or editing for publications, wire services, radio and television; advertising; photojournalism; public relations; production, direction, and editing for television and film; writing in special fields such as business, economics, education, medicine, politics, and science; radio broadcasting and production; broadcast sales; audience research; and administration and management of the editorial, advertising and business functions of publications, broadcast stations and other mass communications services.

Law - The law degree program offered through the Muskie/FSA Program leads to an LL.M degree (Master of Law), which offers lawyers an opportunity to engage in extensive specialized study and research in a particular area of law. Students undertake intensive analysis of issues with specialists in the field and are provided with additional skills necessary to practice or teach that area of law. An undergraduate degree in law is a prerequisite for application to this field.

Library and Information Sciences - Library and information science is the study of the organization, storage, dissemination, and management of information in a variety of formats, such as books, documents, manuscripts, machine-readable databases, and filmed and recorded materials. A graduate program in library and information science imparts the skills necessary to deal with an increasing diversification of electronic sources of information, as well as the more traditional print forms.

Public Administration - Prepares individuals to serve as managers in the executive branches of local, state, and federal government, as well as in private and non-profit organizations, such as museums, foundations, and charities which serve public interests. The field of public administration is based on the social sciences and draws on economics, political science, and sociology. It includes coursework that trains individuals to analyze, manage, and deliver public programs and services.

Public Health - Prepares specialists to monitor and evaluate potential and actual health hazards, and to plan and manage health programs. Public health can be defined as population-based health. Public health professionals assure the conditions necessary for people to live healthy lives through community-wide prevention and protection programs. They prevent epidemics and the spread of disease, protect against environmental hazards, prevent injuries, promote and encourage healthy behavior and mental health, respond to disasters and assist communities in recovery and assure the quality of health services. Public health professionals include epidemiologists, biostatisticians, health policy specialists, health planners, environmental health specialists, health program administrators, nutritionists, health educators, and behavioral scientists.

Public Policy - The systematic analysis of public policy issues and decision-making processes. Includes instruction in the role of economic and political factors in public decision making and policy formation, microeconomic analysis of policy issues, resource allocation and decision modeling, cost/benefit analysis, and statistical methods. Public policy analyzes the content and effects of policy with the goal of improving it or developing new policy.
